"... if a 25-year-old Muslim man who has been traveling frequently to Yemen or Pakistan tries to board a plane, then not only statistical analysis but also common sense tells us that he is more of a potential threat than the grandmother from Queens."

-John Faso, Republican Candidate for Governor of NY

At a time when racial profiling is deemed to be "common sense", it is imperative that society reassess the direction of our public policy. AMAL invites you to participate in this very important dialogue. Our panel will explore the historical foundations of racial profiling, the impact it has had on the African American, Latino, Arab, Muslim and South Asian communities and the process by which this illegal practice has evolved into a perceived, "common sensical" solution to our present day security needs...
